Double Majoring with Economics

Knowledge of economics is often considered central to success in fields such as banking, finance and business management, and it also pairs well with other majors of interest. So, you could pursue a personal area of interest while also gaining the business acumen of an economics major.

Some majors that pair particularly well are:

English, Philosophy, Religious Studies, Sociology, Women's & Gender Studies. Because these majors pair well with Economics both in content and in curriculum design, it's possible for most students to double-major in these fields without adding time to graduation.
